Virginia-based Dominion Energy is building a new gas refinery, power plant and export terminal in Southern Maryland to liquefy and ship fracked gas from surrounding states to India and Japan.

This facility is being built in a neighborhood with houses as close as across the street and almost 2,400 homes, 19 in-home daycare centers and two elementary schools within two miles. There is NO safe evacuation route.

Industry standards call for at least a two-mile buffer zone, but there is no buffer zone to protect the residents of Cove Point.

We are asking Gov. Larry Hogan to order a safety study so that we know what dangers we face from the facility, but so far he refuses to order it. Please call Gov. Hogan at 410 974 3901 and join us in asking for a safety study for Cove Point.
